PISTOL SHOOTING

AT THE SOURCE OF THE OLYMPIC LEGEND

I SSF NEWS MAGAZINE'S JOURNEY THROUGH THE HISTORY OF SHOOTING AT THE GAMES CONTINUES TODAY WITH THE PISTOL EVENTS, AFTER REVIEWING RIFLE SHOOTING IN THE FIRST ISSUE OF THE YEAR. NEXT STOP: ROYAL ARTILLERY BARRACKS, WOOLWICH, LONDON.

That's where the 2012 Olympic Games will take place, on the lines of an innovative shooting range, a temporary structure which will be used for the first time in the history of our sport. There, the five Olympic events of pistol shooting will take place starting on July 28, when the best shooters of the world will compete in the first pistol match, the 10m Air Pistol Men event. But that's what will happen in a few weeks, at the end of July. Let's take a look back at how this all began. Pistol shooting has been a part of the Games since the very beginning. The founder of the modern Olympics, PIERRE FREDY BARON DE COUBERTIN, creator of the first modern Games in 1896, was a pistol shooter himself. The noble French man was a sport aficionado, practicing boxing, fencing, rugby, rowing and horse riding, but he had a special attachment to pistol shooting, so much that he earned the title of French champion seven times in his lifetime. But in spite of its noble origins, Pistol shooting became a mass sport in the following centuries, and shooters from 115 DIFFERENT NATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEES have competed in the Games since then. Once again – as seen in Rifle events – US ATHLETES have been the most active shooters, with 82 athletes competing in Pistol events in 22 different editions of the Olympic Games. Following them, the home nation of the modern Olympics founders, FRANCE, has participated in 21 editions, placing 62 athletes on the Pistol lines.

SWEDEN, a country well represented for years by Pistol legend RAGNAR SKANAKER, participated in 19 different Olympics with 52 athletes competing throughout the years, while GREAT BRITAIN, the host of the next 2012 Olympic Games, also has had a proud tradition of pistol shooting. Starting on the very first edition, in 1896, and then for 16 editions, 51 British athletes have competed in the Olympics. Since that first edition, when Pistol shooting was accepted among the top sports as a part of the Olympic competitions, events have changed, and technique has evolved dramatically. But the basic skills are still the same: a strong mind and a steady hand are required, and there is no technological improvement which can substitute for hard training. Hours and hours of work before a target, competing against yourself, trying to reach the score that will take you to the top. (Table 1)

PISTOL SHOOTING OLYMPIC LEGENDS

Pistol shooting is part of the Olympic tradition since its beginning, as the founder of the modern Olympics – BARON PIERRE DE COUBERTIN – was a pistol shooter himself. But in the following years, some shooters were able to write their name in the history of the Games, and to become Olympic legends in their own right. Legends from the past, such as the most titled pistol shooter of all times – USA's ALFRED LANE, a five time Olympic medalist between 1912 and 1920. Or such as famous Hungarian shooter KAROLY TAKACS, mentioned in all shooting history books. He was a top athlete for years as member of the Hungarian team, but in 1938 a hand grenade blew off his right hand. Not a big deal for the right handed world team title holder, who taught himself to shoot left handed and won two gold medals at the 1948 and 1952 Olympic Games. Events like that happened in the past, so it should not surprise us that in 1896, a Danish shooter, LOUIS HOLGER NIELSEN was able to win three medals, two in shooting and one in fencing!

Note: 115 countries in total / 111 countries (1245 athletes) for Men / 71 countries (201 athletes) for Women

Some other athletes are living (and competing) legends of our sport, such as SCHUMANN, SKANAHER, WANG, GROZDEVA, SEKARIC and SALUKVADZE, who are still part of the shooting world as active shooters or coaches.

RALF SCHUMANN, for example, was the only shooter able to win three Gold medals in the same event, the 25m Rapid Fire Pistol event, and was one of the only three pistol shooters able to win two Gold medals in the same event back to back, in 1992 and 1996. Schumann won three Gold and two Silver medals from 1988 and 2008, absent from the podium in 2000 only, when he protested a score and got a penalty of two points, missing the bronze by a few decimals.

In the same year, China's WANG YIFU, a 10m Air Pistol and 50m Pistol shooter became a true Chinese hero. Earning two Olympic Gold and a total of six Olympic medals, with a twenty-year span between his first Bronze at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles and the Gold won at Athens 2004, he has become one of the most famous sportsmen in China. Currently, Wang is the head coach of the Chinese team, and he will try to guide his athletes to the highest step of the medal standings at the London Games as he did in Beijing four years ago.

An older champion, Sweden's RAGNAR SKANAHER, became part of the history of Pistol shooting at the Games by being one of the most consistent shooters of the international scene. Winning his first Olympic Gold medal in 1972, in Munich, he maintained himself at the top of the world rankings for thirty years. Winning another Olympic medal at the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona (a Bronze at the 50m Pistol Men event) at the age of 58, thus also becoming the oldest medallist of the Pistol discipline of all times.

Among the women, MARIA GROZDEVA of Bulgaria and JASNA SEKARIC of Serbia have been duelling since the eighties – and continue duelling – (we will talk about them later on). Another strong competitor, Georgia's Olympic multi-medallist NINO SALUKVADZE, will also be a part of the London Games. She won her last Olympic award in Beijing, where she finished in the spotlight by hugging her Russian competitor before of the cameras on the day Russia and Georgia engaged in battle. She won her first Olympic medal for URS at the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, in the 25m Pistol Women events, and the Bronze medal won in Beijing came after 20 years of shooting at the highest levels and in a different event, the 10m Air Pistol Women.

NATIONS

"Top 3" at the Top of the Rankings

The "Top 3" – USA, CHN and URS – head the historical medal standings rank of Pistol events, taking into consideration all medals and all events since the beginning of the modern Olympic era. And they are practically invincible, if we consider number of athletes they have been developing and preparing to participate in the Games throughout the years. The American, Chinese and Russian pistol shooters have always been in the spotlight during the last Olympic editions, where their flags proudly rise behind the podium.

The UNITED STATES OF AMERICA stands at the top of the rankings, with an outstanding total number of 22 medals won from 1896 to 2008, with 12 Gold, six Silver, and four Bronze medals. Six medals more than those reached by the PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA, following in second place with an overall total of 16 medals – 8 Gold, 6 Silver and 2 Bronze. But what's most impressive is that the Chinese team reached the second position of the chart in about 20 years, with their first medal won just in 1984. Considering the number of participations and the number of medals won, China turns out to be the fastest growing country: while the US team earns one medal each Olympic participation in average, China wins two. At this speed, it will only take a few years for China to step up to the lead. Following the Top 2, the former URS still holds the third place, with a total of 14 awards earned from 1956 through 1988. URS athletes do not compete anymore, but just a few medals away, the new Russian team has managed to climb up the chart. Starting its history in the Olympics in 1912, and returning in 1992, Russia won 13 medals, four Gold, five Silver and four Bronze, and is listed as one of the strongest competitors in Pistol events today. (Table 2)

PISTOL CHAMPIONS

At the heart of the Games

Athletes contribute to the history of the Olympics by taking some human skills to the limit, and often beyond that point. Some great pistol shooters helped write the history of the modern Olympic Games by achieving extraordinary results which remain as a legacy to the future generations. That's what happened with the longest standing Olympic record of all times, among all current Olympic events, the 581-point record scored by ALEXSANDER MELENTIEV of URS at the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow, which still stands.

Legendary men stepped up to the Olympic pistol lines, such as 25m Rapid Fire German Pistol shooter RALF SCHUMANN, winner of an impressive total of five individual medals – including three Gold, two of which were obtained back to back – all in the same event, thus becoming the most titled Pistol shooter of the modern Olympics in individual events. Throughout the years, nobody has been able to defeat Schumann ever since his first participation in the Olympic Games in 1988. He is still an active competitor, ready to increase his collection of medals. China's WANG YIFU follows him in the multi-medallist chart, with two Gold, three Silver and one Bronze, for a total of six medals, won between 1984 and 2004.

Names of great Pistol shooters also emerge from the past, when team events were also part of the Olympic program. The USA's ALFRED P. LANE, who competed in 1912 and 1920, earned a total of six Olympic medals, including five Gold, an impressive figure. His team-mate, KARL TELFORD FREDERICK, also finished in the spotlight during those years, winning three different Olympic medals in the same Games, in 1920 – which would only be possible today, even without team events, by finishing in first place in all three individual pistol men events.

When looking at the medal standings by team, the USA pistol team still stands on top of the rankings, with a total of 21 Olympic medals won in individual men and team events – 17 medals if considering individual events alone. CHINA and GERMANY follow, with China winning ten individual medals in men events, and Germany earning nine.

And among those athletes who wrote the history of Pistol Shooting at the Games, we should also mention the top participants, those shooters who held the pistol for years, becoming legends. Such AFANASIJS KUZMINS, from Latvia, who competed under the URS flag in the past. In 1976 he began to participate in the first of eight Olympic Games in the events of 10m Air Pistol and 25m Rapid Fire Pistol men, missing only once, at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, because of a boycott by team URS. Or such as Pistol guru RAGNAR SKANAKER, born in 1934, who competed in seven Olympic Games as of 1972, when he won Gold at the Olympics in Munich at the age of 38. The Swedish athlete turned out to be one of the best and most consistent pistol shooters in the history of the ISSF. Finishing on the Olympic podium in 1984 and 1988 again, he then closed his success streak with a Bronze at the 1992 Barcelona Games, 20 years after his first medal. Currently, he is still part of the sport, as a coach and equipment developer. (Tables 3a, 3b, 4a, 4b, 5)

Sauer shooting shoes: firm when standing and flexible when walking

PERFECT STYLE FLEX

EASY STYLE FLEX

in accordance with the requirements of the ISSF which stipulate that the soles of special shooting shoes and boots must be flexible enough to allow for the natural flexing action of the foot when walking, the Sauer team has redesigned the structure of the soles of their sports shoes.

A flexible strip of supple material in TPU (thermoplastic polyurethane) has now been vulcanised into the sole, which previously lacked flexibility, in the area of the ball of the foot (patent pending, DPMA). This enables the shoe to follow the natural flexing of the foot during walking but returns to its initial position in order to provide a stable, flat surface when the wearer is standing – just the way sports shooters want it and as they have come to expect.

WOMEN

A fundamental part of the success of Pistol events

Shooting Sport has changed throughout the years, and so have the events within the Olympic program. In order to give women more chances to compete, and to encourage the development of the sport by the member federations, separate shooting events dedicated to women were introduced at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles. Canada's LINDA THOM became the first woman to win an Olympic shooting Gold medal, as this was the first women's event held in 1984. She and American RUBY FOX tied for first place with 585, but Thom won the shoot-off 148-147. Since then, some great athletes have been writing the history of pistol shooting shot after shot.

Three shooters in the course of the Games reached the top of the rankings, obtaining five Olympic medals each. At the top of the chart stands MARINA LOGVINENKO, shooting for URS, EUN and Russia, who competed in the 1988, 1992 and 1996 Olympic Games, earning two Gold medals, one Silver and two Bronzes. And even if she seemed invincible in those years, two younger shooters competed neck and neck against her: Grozdeva and Sekaric. Bulgaria's MARIA GROZDEVA finished on the podium in 1992, 1996, 2000 and 2004, winning two Gold medals and three Bronzes in both the women's pistol events. At the same time, Serbia's top athlete JASNA SEKARIC won one Olympic Gold, three Silver medals and one Bronze. And the Games are not over, as London 2012 might be another exciting chapter written by women in pistol events.

Among the most successful women pistol shooters we should mention the most consistent athletes who participated in several different Olympic editions. Two shooters who are still active, Georgia's NINO SALUKVADZE and Serbia's JASNA SEKARIC, along with Greece's AGATHI KASSOUMI, turned out to be the shooters with the highest

MULTI PARTICIPATION

There are no Chinese shooters in the multi-participation rank, but China still stands at the top of the multi-medallists chart, and that proves how quickly the Asian giant transforms its team from Games to Games, always finding new young talent to win the matches. With a winning streak which started in 1992, right up until the latest Beijing's Games, the PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA has won a total of six medals – and most of them (4) were Gold. Following in second, the Bulgarian team – with the help of the two-time Olympic medallist Grozdeva – also earned six medals in the time span between 1992 – 2004, including two Gold, one Silver and three Bronze medals. Coming in next, in the most-titled countries chart, the 1992 former-URS EUN team, the URS and Russia follows in third, fourth and fifth place, proving how the Russian pistol school has been and remains one of the best in the world. A great shooting sport academy which will send its champions to London, the next showcase for the best pistol shooting competition of the world. (Table 10)
